The real question is why does the forest service feel the need to limit activities in the wilderness and backcountry. Any responsible and respectful outdoors person will respect the land and wildlife. From snowmobiling in the areas that are currently under review, which I'm very lucky to make a few trips out to this area every winter to enjoy the forest and amazing views. When you keep forest land open to EVERYONE! The surrounding towns thrive. In the winter snowmobiles keep west Yellowstone's lights on. Please consider not changing anything to limit the areas for motorized and non motorized activities. There is enough land that both groups can get along. Again please don't limit any areas for all activities.

Thanks
