Comments:

There is so little true wilderness left in our country that we must do whatever is necessary to protect what little we still have of wild places and wild creatures. Roadless areas should remain just that: roadless! These beautiful wild places should not be compromised by ATVs or other gas or electric powered vehicles. Livestock and pack animals should be kept to a minimum or possibly not allowed at all and human activity should also be very limited and constantly monitored to assure no harm is being done. Just because human beings are not "using" a place doesn't mean that place is without value. I may never go to the Custer Gallatin Forest or the surrounding wilderness areas but I want to know that they exist! Protect our wilderness!!
