While I support the wilderness recommendations in Alternative D of the Revised Draft Forest Plan, it is essential to add the entire 230,000 wild, roadless acres of the Gallatin Range as Recommend Wilderness in the final forest plan. Added points about the wild Gallatin Range's importance:

The draft plan does not include sufficient direction for administering the Absaroka-Beartooth and Lee Metcalf Wildernesses. Specifically, the current wilderness management plans allows destructively large groups of up to 25 head of stock (horses and mules) and 15 people in most areas. Research shows that impacts increase significantly when group-sizes exceed eight head of stock and 12 people. The Forest Service should reduce group size limits accordingly to protect all Wildernesses on the forest from harm. In addition, the forest plan should put an end to ecologically destructive fish stocking in naturally fishless wilderness lakes or else risk significantly altering the areas' natural conditions.

The plan should prohibit all motorized and mechanized uses, and any other activities not consistent with wilderness protection, in the Recommended Wilderness areas in order to preserve their wilderness qualities until Congress acts on the wilderness recommendations.

The plan must address the issue of human and pack animal feces contamination of lakes and streams on the Beartooth Plateau in the Absaroka-Beartooth Wilderness. Eliminating fish stocking may solve much of this problem, but additional measures must be included if needed.
